

Corinne and David Menn, Parents

While we understand that there needs to be assessments of students and standards, the Common Core standards are evolving year to year and the teachers are guessing each year at what is going to be on the test. It is like preparing for a test that you don't really know what is going to be on the test. It is unfair to assess teachers based on this flawed testing system and standards. The best place for teachers to be assessed would be locally, by their principal and looking at the overall effectiveness of their teaching, not by a flawed test score. It is a waste of their precious time with our students for them to be focussed on teaching to a test that is always changing.
