I think that teachers should be taught in how to teach the new common core. That way, they can't be held accountable for what they don't know how to do, and we as students don't have to get bad grades in the regents/common core tests because teachers aren't sure how to teach according to the new common core. My algebra common core grade struggled because of this, I passed, but it was really difficult. Same thing with geometry. Thank you for your time :)
