

Tracey Simon, Parent, PS 116

4th grade core is too narrow for growing minds. It's cookie cutter and doesn't take into account different creative processes of children that age. The result also effects their futures - this is wrong. Graders need to give points for all kinds of process and various ways children learn and come up with answers. All in all, 4th grade test too standardized and doesn't measure potential. I don't agree with administering without substantial changes. Tracey Simon parent.