"As a teacher and parent holds several degrees including one in Administration, Common Core is creating anxiety amongst educators and students. The work is ridiculous and doesn't allow our kids to learn and become respected members of society but in fact creates anxiety and lack of interest in higher education. The standards are set too high expecting kids to read and understand math problems and concepts, for example, at age 6 is horrible. Our kids are being set up for failure! Let teachers get back to the basics our President and leaders learned in school by teachers who were devoted and not constantly under scrutiny to test and assess ridiculous methods."
