Christina Wray Asaro, Parent, Ps116

I do not agree with the current methos is the common core curriculum

Each child learns at a different place and different learning style

The common core does not take into account children w learning disabilities

It is even more absurd that children w all types of diackaibilyiee even autism all degrees is to take these tests with more time and help !

You are failing these kids tremendously by not only setting them up to so poorly but also not teaching them in the manner they can be taught

It is not a one size fits all education process we are looking for

Teach children at the capabilities they are allowed