Two Points:

1. Field testing: Obviously the field tests were either not done or had results that were wildly different from the live test results for three years. But if they were done, and if the results corresponded to the results of the live tests, then it can be assumed that NYSED expected these terrible results. for three years.
2. Content area literacy - Teachers of subjects other than English language arts are not getting the message that it is their job to embed content-based literacy instruction.
