

Alison Blass, Parent, Rhinebeck Central Schools

I dislike the use of Common Core because, in my opinion, students learn at individual rates and with CC, this is not taken into account. Also, I feel very strongly that teachers shouldn't be evaluated based on their students' performance with regard to CC standards for the very reason stated above. Additionally, there is no proof that CC improves the quality of education. Likewise, I don't feel that a parent that opts out of their student taking the CC testing should be counted negatively against the district. So therefore, I would argue that Common Core should be discontinued.
