

Marjorie K Bailey, Teacher

"I would like to see some type of revamp to the APPR. It is so flawed by tying student assessment scores to teacher evaluation. There are so many variables that affect student scores. A few are student motivation, no consequences for not doing well on the test, behavior issues, health problems, poor home life, the student or family does not value education and not parental support. Teachers do not get to choose the raw materials they have to work with. They have to take everyone even though so many factors determine a child's success in learning."
