I am very much against standardized testing. Government should not be involved in our children's learning aside from "No Child left behind". There's far too much testing and a lot less child empowerment. The time slotted for freethinking that was going on in our classrooms is now dedicated to teaching to the test. The testing is also phrased in such a way to test our children with regards to two answers being very similar. The nuances are very confusing for younger children. I feel that it's unfair. Please, let's go back to a world that allows us to think outside of the box.
