"Having two children in school grade 1 and 5 we are faced with homework challenges daily, the challenge is not to complete it but to understand it. We as parents are left helpless when trying to assist our children due to the new wording, problem solving techniques and concepts. Math is an exact science changing wording of the process by which you get the answer does not change the outcome however it does change homework dynamics. Implementation of common core and more testing has taken away from learning and enjoying the process."
