

Beth A Farrar, Teacher, William Street School

While raising standards is a wonderful idea, creating standards that are far beyond age appropriate readiness are not. I have been teaching for 25 years and have never seen so many students feel defeated and frustrated. Our students are losing their love for learning. Instead of providing time for critical thinking and creative problem solving, we are creating drones who know how to respond to test questions. God help our future....