

Patrick Farrar, Teacher

I am a teacher, and I see no problem with raising standards. I, however, do have a serious and significant problem with tying a person's future to a standardized test. I have never felt so alone, helpless, and scared in a district that is actually performing very well. This is not the answer to raising standards.