

Adrienne Houkmaley, Teacher, NPUT

Children learn through doing, discussing, reflecting and connecting. CCLS Modules are packed full of ideas, with little room for the processing that children need to go through in order to assimilate knowledge to the point that they are then able to think critically. I want to engage students with material and have them make it their own. Moving from unit to unit too quickly negates this process.