

Melissa Kreso, Parent

I am so happy you are including parents in the common core task force. I believe this is so important for our kids well being and that over time our children's math skills will be more on par internationally. i only wish I was a student learning under this system for English as well. I would love to be on this task force. My two children are young and are going to spend many years in our education system. I do not want the criteria they should be mastering changed due to resistance of people who don't understand it all and are afraid of not being able to show their own weaknesses. This is so important and crucial to our children on an international level if we want to continue creating opportunities and allowing success for our future generations. The side opposing common core has such a strong voice. Please make sure the other side is represented as well.
