"I have a son in kindergarten this year who is very bright. It makes me sad that he is expected to sit at his desk for so long during the day and gets such little time for play. Children this age learn through play. He only gets one 20min recess each day in a six hour day at school. It's not the way our kids should be starting off their education career. They should be playing and learning through play, and therefore developing a love and thirst for learning instead of turning them in to robots."
