

Shannon Moraes, Parent

As a parent of four children in the public school system, I am witnessing how a rigid testing standard is negatively impacting our brightest students. With so much focus on the testing, teachers are left with less time for creative enrichment for our brightest. And our brightest students are instead spending time helping their peers that require extra help. Is this how we prepare our next generation of innovators and leaders?