

Meri Pellow, Parent

The homework that is related to common core for math and ela is very confusing and tricky. It almost seems that we want the children to get the wrong answers. The ties between common core and standardized testing and money and the government are unsettling. Creativity for students and teachers has been pushed to the sidelines. It is a sad time for education.