The Common Core Curriculum was implemented too quickly without any research to prove that this is the proper material to teach children. The tests have been too difficult and not grade appropriate for most students. The APPR has also been a disaster. It is not a logical way to accurately and fairly assess educators. The new plan that must take effect in September is even more illogical. It is setting up most public educators to fail. It is amazing how so many critical decisions have been made about our education system by people who are not educators. Up until now, all of our concerns have fallen on deaf ears. I truly hope a positive change is coming soon.
