

Ashwini Sukthankar, Parent

I have many concerns about the rigidity of the Common Core, but I really want to use this opportunity to note how destructive I find the standardized testing process. As matters currently stand, the testing is a distraction and a significant step backward, away from learning, rather than an opportunity to genuinely cement or assess a child's understanding of the material. I sincerely hope that New York State will urgently review the obsession with testing, in the best interests of our children.
