

Constance Samways, Parent

"The Common Core is doing nothing to help our students learn anything but how to take a test. My son is one of the fortunate students that was able to adapt and he scores well, so this is not sour grapes on my part. This testing mentality is doing nothing but pigeon-holing student ability to take a yearly test. The administrators, teachers, and students all stress and focus on 3 day's worth of testing rather than enjoying a learning experience and actually coming out of school feeling like they accomplished something. Even the students know this is a waste of their time. Please stop turning our children into robots."
