

Carry Tomkiewicz, Parent

As a parent of five children, these last few years I have seen my children struggle like no other. My youngest son who is eight in third grade is so frustrated with his school studies-homework that he now doesn't want to attend!?

Yes we may not have the highest success rate for college ready students but I guarantee it has only gotten worse since the Common Core Program has been effected!!!

I say...allow these children to learn and enjoy there journey with their education while learning, let's stop unwanted and not needed grueling homework sessions and testing!!!

PS, Allow our educators to enjoy teaching not crumble over it watching numerous children struggle and families being frustrated because their child is not where they should be according to the Common Core Standards!!!! Thank You
